PSYCHOLOGICAL FLEXIBILITY & INFLEXIBILITY

Below are the lists of inflexible and flexible thinking Kain discussed in his video.

Either circle (if printed) or write in the box below the statements which apply to you (and add any others you can think of)

FLEXIBLE MIND (Loose Elastic)

I strive to maintain an open mind.

I am open to new ideas & perspectives.

There are truths beyond those I have experienced which have been proven by scientific methods.

I never make uninformed assumptions.
I listen attentively to understand.

I allow time for new ideas to 'sink in'.

I let people finish speaking before I judge them or arrive at a well-formed conclusion.

INFLEXIBLE MIND (Tight Elastic)

My perspective is most important.
I must be right all of the time.

I am NOT interested in hearing anything that contradicts my opinions, beliefs or current world views.

I reject ideas that I disagree with.
I listen to have my thoughts validated.
I am afraid of new paradigms.

I would rather prove other people to be 'wrong' than have my own worldviews challenged and expanded.

Use the space below to list and analyse the statements which are most relatable. How would you like to change your thinking for the better? Why do you believe you think the way you do? Write down ways in which you plan to challenge your thinking and make your mind less inflexible.
